

To Whom It May Concern:

Mr Kevin Magee

Prior to the sale of Brisco Engineering in August 2003, Kevin was the Chief Electronics Engineer at Brisco, and formed part of the management team of the company. As is typical in small to medium enterprises, the role was a broad ranging one, with Kevin taking full responsibility not only for the technical aspects of current projects and R&D projects, but also for the technical sales effort of the company.

During the time Kevin was part of the management team, he proved an extremely competent and reliable manager. His enthusiasm and interest in the technology was a valuable asset during management discussions and presentations, and was a significant contributory factor to the company gaining approval for a major, and subsequently successful, research and development project.

As the leader of a team working on complex system integration projects, Kevin was always noted for his technical competence, and his refusal to accept anything less than the best solution to a problem. This led to consistently successful results, and coupled with his transparent style of dealing with people, led to consistently satisfied customers.

By taking full responsibility of the task in hand, and by always using appropriate levels of initiative, Kevin was able to make a significant contribution to the running of a very profitable business. I would have no hesitation in recommending him as a valuable team player with an attitude to work which encourages and inspires those around him.
